Pastor's Desk

In today's readings, we hear about shepherds. The first reading is a warning to shepherds who are not taking care of the sheep or the people. Shepherds who only shepherd themselves or only take care of themselves. God will raise up other shepherds who will take care of the sheep. I believe that this reading is not just for pastors or priests but it is also for parents and those in authority. Many of us may be in a role of teaching or mentoring. In Someway, you are like a shepherd. Shepherds and those in authority are to give of themselves. To give up their lives. Sheep can be helpless in the world. They need protection. Shepherds have a staff to fight off the wolves. Sometimes sheep don't know how to take care of themselves. Shepherds are trained in protection and guidance.

In the gospel, we see that Jesus's heart was moved with pity for the people who were like sheep. These people needed to be taught and led in the ways of Godliness. We see that Jesus spent time teaching them. It is not only important to feed people but to feed people the scriptures and knowledge of God. This is what satisfies our hunger. Jesus is that true Shepherd that takes care of His flock. Even human shepherds are flawed and sinful. None of us are perfect. Even priests have to go to confession. Christ redeems and renews us in the sacraments. When we stay close to Christ and His teachings, we become extraordinary. We become living vessels of Christ.

God bless you all, Fr. Tony Fortman, C.P.P.S.

Calendar Update

The church calendar is not just a way to keep track of events; it's a powerful tool for evangelization. By ensuring that all activities are well-coordinated and communicated, we can reach out more effectively to our community. Dates are being added for our fall events. As a reminder, reservations for event spaces need to be made with each individual parish office.

Promoting Your Event

Ministry leaders should submit all event details to the Communications Manager, including date, time, location, and any relevant descriptions and contact information as early as possible.

If a flyer is being designed, the designer should collaborate with the communications manager to ensure consistency in messaging and branding.

Please direct your submissions to: Joan Macpherson, Communications Manager: 937-276-5954, jmacpherson@preciousbloodchurch.org.
Email communication is preferred.

Notes from Emmanuel's Choir Loft

From Music Director Michelle Carner

St. Romanos the Melodist, patron saint of Emmanuel's choir, was born in Syria in the 5th century to Jewish parents. Later, he became sacristan at the Hagia Sophia in Constantinople, where he read so dreadfully on one Christmas Eve that another reader had to take his place. Even the clergy ridiculed him. The next day, the Blessed Virgin appeared to the devastated youth, presenting him with a scroll which she ordered him to eat. He did so and was given the gifts of understanding, composition, and hymnography. That evening, Romanos sang, in a wondrous voice, his first Kontakion (hymn): "Today the Virgin gives birth to the transcendent One." Of the thousand hymns attributed to St. Romanos, about eighty survive. Unfamiliar to most people, this saint is well-known in the Byzantine church, and he remains the patron saint of choristers in all Catholic traditions. St. Gaspar Respect Life Group

Love Beyond Measure Natural Family Planning Week

July 21-27

The USCCB has set July 21-27 as Natural Family Planning (NFP) week. NFP is an invitation into communion with God's creativity. God does not persistently produce, his creation ebbs and flows like the cycle of the moon, changing of the seasons, or the journey from life into death. In "The Language of Your Body" Christistina Valenzuela writes "The life of the Church [...] is expressed through her cyclicity, much like the biological woman whose menstrual cycles impact so much of our physical, emotional, and even spiritual lives. When we observe the liturgical life of the Church, we see how layered this cyclical life is." NFP gives insight to the cyclical nature of women, allowing us to monitor health, avoid or achieve pregnancy, and gain deeper understanding into God's design for women.

The world sells us "solutions" to fertility such as birth control (BC) and artificial reproductive technology (ART). Besides the ethical issues with BC & ART, both are riddled with long term side effects. BC is often prescribed to "regulate" when it really shuts down functions without addressing actual underlying issues and long term risks like infertility. ART is sold as the solution to infertility but the success rates vary, and at the highest are around 50% for a single cycle. However NaProTechnology (NPT), which utilizes NFP, has a success rate of up to 80% as an initial treatment for infertility. Not only does NFP respect God's design for fertility, it is often more effective than the "medical" alternative. As we enter NFP week, consider this year's theme of "Love Beyond Measure" an invitation on how NFP provides an opportunity to encounter God's immeasurable love in his design for the cyclical nature of women.
